Life and career [edit]

Iglesias was born in Ourense. During the Spanish Civil War, Iglesias fought for the Nationalists led by General Franco. In 1943, he married Maria del Rosario de la Cueva y Perignat and the couple had two sons Julio Iglesias and Carlos. They divorced in 1983.

In December 1981 he was kidnapped by Basque ETA and held for two weeks, eventually being found unharmed.<sup>[2]</sup> He became a fixture of gossip magazines, always ready to chat with journalists revealing information about his famous descendants.

In the early 1990s, he met US citizen Ronna Keitt. The two married in 2001 in a secret ceremony witnessed by close family and photographers from a magazine.

On May 18, 2004, Ronna gave birth to a boy, Jaime Iglesias. Iglesias was 89 and Ronna was 40. The baby's half brother, Julio, was 61-years-old. The baby's nephews were 31-year-old Julio, Jr. and 29-year-old Enrique. After Jaime was born in 2004, Iglesias rejected suggestions Ronna was the driving force behind their decision to start a family. "At my age, a child is marvellous...I felt just like Abraham," he declared. "If people say I just did it for my wife, I don't take it as an insult, but the truth is I wanted to do it just as much as she did...My wife wanted to do it and we did it...It was an act of generosity towards her. I leave her part of my blood, of my life. I need her so much that I said to her, 'Here, this is what you wanted for when I am gone.'"

Barely after announcing the arrival of her first baby, Ronna underwent fertility treatment in order to conceive again. IV treatment is speculated to have been used for their second child. Iglesias died suddenly in Madrid the morning of December 19, 2005, at the age of 90. Ruth was born July 26, 2006, 7 months and 8 days after her father died.
